Title:	AM-6-9 to Res 3.: Climate Adaptation Against Inequalities
Tabled by:	EGP Committee

Insert from line 6 to 7:

Mitigation remains indispensable, but adaptation can no longer be postponed. The failure of COP31 in Antalya to reach an overarching agreement, advance the global transition away from fossil fuels and deliver sufficient climate finance is a serious setback for international climate action. Every delay in mitigation increases the need for adaptation, disproportionately affecting those who have contributed least to the climate crisis. The EU must respond by stepping up its own climate ambition and strengthening international cooperation for climate justice. In the absence of consensus, qualified majority voting must be considered as a means of advancing climate goals in international negotiations. Climate change amplifies inequalities: wealthier people and businesses can buy
