Title:	AM-55-1 to Res 3.: Climate Adaptation Against Inequalities
Tabled by:	Bündnis90/Die Grünen

From line 54 to 56:

Migration can be an adaptation strategy when people have resources and choices, but when systems fail it becomes a necessity. Europe must prepare for ~~internal displacement~~climatedisplacement and ~~increasing migration~~ climate migration, including from neighbouring ~~regions.~~ regions and across continents. People displaced by climate impacts currently have no legal status under international law, and this protection gap must be closed. The European Greens welcome the European Commission's proposal for a European Climate Resilience Law (COM(2026) 730) and call for it to become an ambitious framework that puts social justice, the protection of vulnerable communities and adequate long-term funding at its heart.

Explanation / Comment

Justification 1: Climate displacement is not only internal. Many people move across borders and continents, and international law provides no legal status for people displaced by climate impacts. The text should name this protection gap openly instead of referring to international law that does not cover them.
Justification 2: Links the resolution to the Commission's proposal for a European Climate Resilience Law and sets out what the Greens expect from it: social justice, protection of vulnerable communities and adequate long-term funding.
