Title: AM-54-1 to Res 4.: Defending the Right to Protest

Tabled by: Federation of Young European Greens

Insert after line 54:

14. Digital activism is an important part of political activism and must be defended. Encryption and the secrecy of digital correspondence must be protected so that people can organise and express their views without fear.

Explanation / Comment

Protests are increasingly organised, documented and amplified online, and the resolution does not address digital activism. It only addresses surveillance technology. Weakening encryption or monitoring digital communications exposes activists to surveillance and retaliation.
