Insert from line 9 to 10:

improved. This means that for every one person who has gained greater freedom of expression, nineteen have seen that freedom diminished.

In the past year, we have witnessed governements taking down on peaceful protests in several countries such as in France against students demanding more budget for education, in Italy against people protesting against the rising cost of life, or in Albania against citizens opposing corruption. The use of battons, water canons, tear gas or grenades is now common in demonstrations in several European countries, seriously undermining the right to protest.
